St. John the Theologian, also known as St. John the Evangelist, is one of the twelve apostles of Jesus and is traditionally credited with writing the Gospel of John, three epistles (1 John, 2 John, and 3 John), and the Book of Revelation. He is often referred to as "the beloved disciple" and is recognized for his deep theological insights and emphasis on love and eternal life.

In Christian tradition, St. John represents the spiritual aspect of Christ's teachings, focusing on the divine nature of Jesus. His iconography often includes symbols like the eagle, representing the heights of theological thought, and he is frequently depicted with a scroll or a book.

St. John is venerated in various Christian denominations, and his feast days are celebrated on different dates, such as December 27 in the Western Church and September 26 in the Eastern Orthodox Church. His contributions to the New Testament have had a lasting impact on Christian theology and spirituality.
